SCHOOL REPORT

Rhyl children deliver their own weather forecasts

YEAR Two pupils at Ysgol Dewi Sant in Rhyl have been thoroughly enjoying their new roles as weather reporters this half term, putting their skills behind the camera and microphone, as well as their knowledge of Wales and the elements, to the test.

They have been focusing on the weather and its causes as part of their thematic project, with pupils learning how to describe the forecast across the various regions of Wales.

In pairs, children have worked together to both record and deliver their video weather reports.

Teacher Meisha Woolford said: "They've got a map of Wales, and they're learning the names of the different towns in Wales and the words for different types of weather, and doing a bit of performing and recording as if they're telling the weather on the news.

"We've been going out to measure the weather as well, using thermometers and measuring rainfall.

"Later on, we'll be showing their videos in front of the class."
